Description

A fine solid oak bureau bookcase dating from the early 20th century, presented in excellent original condition. The upper section features two beautifully crafted leaded glass doors with coloured diamond panels, enclosing two adjustable shelves for books or display. The fall-front writing surface opens to reveal a fitted interior with compartments and small drawers, perfect for letters and stationery. Below are three drawers with brass handles, offering good storage space. The piece retains its original working key and stands on turned front legs. A charming and practical example of early 20th-century English craftsmanship — elegant, sturdy, and full of character.
