Description

A beautiful Edwardian oak dressing table dating from the early 20th century, c.1910. The piece features an elegant oval bevelled mirror supported by turned finials, over a rectangular top fitted with two small drawers and two open compartments. Below are two larger drawers with decorative mouldings and brass handles, offering ample storage space. The table stands on barley twist legs joined by stretchers, all raised on original brass castors. Crafted in solid oak with a warm patina, this dressing table combines fine craftsmanship with timeless style — a perfect statement piece for a bedroom or dressing room. Height (table only): 66 cm The dressing table is offered in very good condition, sturdy and ready for use. A fine example of Edwardian furniture, full of character and charm.
