Description

Georgian Oak Cross-Banded Dresser Base, c. 18th Century This elegant Georgian oak dresser base showcases the timeless craftsmanship of the 18th century. Constructed from rich, well-patinated oak, it features a beautifully figured top above three deep drawers, each framed with fine cross-banding and fitted with original brass plate handles. The dresser stands on square tapered legs with chamfered inner edges, offering both stability and refined simplicity typical of the Georgian period. The warm colour, excellent proportions, and smooth finish make this piece a superb example of English country furniture – perfect as a hallway console, sideboard, or statement piece in a traditional or modern interior. Key Features: • Period: Georgian, circa 18th century • Material: Solid oak with cross-banded drawer fronts • Original brass handles and escutcheons • Three drawers offering generous storage • Stands on square chamfered legs • Rich, warm patina and excellent condition Dimensions: • Width: 183 cm (72 ins) • Depth: 54 cm (21 ins) • Height: 86 cm (33 ¾ ins)
