Description

A beautifully preserved vintage "Tempus Fugit" longcase grandfather clock, dating from around the 1960s, featuring a fine mahogany case with elegant Georgian-style detailing and arched hood. The brass dial is richly decorated and signed E.J. Goodfellow Wadebridge, a respected British retailer of high-quality clocks. This model houses a German Hermle mechanical movement (model 451-053), a weight-driven eight-day mechanism renowned for precision and reliability. It strikes on the hour and plays the classic Westminster chime. The pendulum and all three brass weights are complete and fully functional. The clock has been professionally serviced, keeping excellent time and producing a warm, resonant chime. A fine decorative and functional piece that brings classic charm to any interior. Approximate dimensions: Height: 189 cm Width: 46 cm Depth: 23 cm Excellent throughout, both mechanically and cosmetically. Minimal age-related marks to the wood, consistent with careful use.
