Description

A beautifully crafted vintage "Tempus Fugit" grandfather clock, dating from around the 1940s, featuring a solid oak case with a warm natural finish and a brass dial with ornate engraved decorations. The clock is fitted with a German D.R.G.M. mechanical movement, known for its precision and durability. It plays the classic Westminster chime and includes a pendulum and twin weights, all fully functional after a complete professional service. This elegant timepiece combines timeless craftsmanship with mid-century quality and is ideal as a statement piece for a living room, hallway, or study. Excellent condition throughout – the mechanism has been professionally serviced, runs accurately, and chimes beautifully. The oak cabinet shows only minimal signs of age, consistent with careful use.
