Description

An Exceptionally Good Quality Set Of Six, 18th Century, Chippendale Period Mahogany Dining Chairs, Having Attractive Splat Backs With Pierced Fan Decoration, Over Upholstered Drop In Seats Raised On Square Chamfered Legs And Stretchers. This fabulous quality set of 18th century mahogany dining chairs are typical in design for the chippendale period and have been constructed using lovely rich mahogany timbers. They are of excellent bold proportions, suitable for even the largest of persons to sit upon for extended periods of time with no worries whatsoever. They are in excellent overall condition with no major damage, or restoration of note to speak of and the seats have been relatively recently reupholstered. Should one wish to change the fabric then the fact they are removable, drop in seats make this a relatively simple task. As fit for purpose as the day they were made and boasting elegance, form and function these are a lovely set of chairs and we can highly recommend them. They have real significance and presence to them and would look fabulous positioned around a wide variety of different dining tables due to their relative simplicity in design and also their ri...
