Description

An early 19th-century oak bedside cabinet, hand-crafted in solid English oak with a shaped gallery top over two small panelled doors opening to a storage compartment, standing on typical square chamfered legs. The surfaces retain their original finish, showing a warm, deep patina developed over two centuries. A nice compact, well-proportioned example with a distinctive character typical of George III provincial furniture from the period. The shaped gallery and tall legs provide a light, upright stance, equally suited to use beside a bed or as an occasional cabinet in a sitting room or hallway. An honest, beautifully preserved example of early rural 19th-century craftsmanship. Presented in very good antique condition with a rich, even patina and minor wear consistent with age. Later but sympathetic 19th-century hardware includes a small turned wooden knob and catch, with mid-Victorian brass hinges neatly fitted in period. Structurally sound, clean and ready to place. English, circa 1820. H: 66 W: 48 D: 38 cm
