Description

A superb Anglo-Indian sideboard crafted from richly grained Padouk and presented in excellent condition, complete with three working keys. The front showcases three arched panels, each intricately carved and pierced, backed with red fabric that can be easily removed or replaced to suit your interior palette. The central panel is gently bow-fronted. Resting on robust claw feet, this commanding piece offers generous storage while serving as a striking focal point. Its fusion of Indian artistry and British colonial design makes it a versatile addition to hallways, dining rooms, or drawing rooms where craftsmanship and heritage are celebrated. With its elegant proportions and decorative detailing, the sideboard also lends itself beautifully to modern living, perfectly suited to sit beneath a flat-screen TV, discreetly housing consoles and media boxes while allowing remote access through the pierced panels. A truly impressive piece, this sideboard brings both character and functionality, elevating any space it inhabits.
