Description

Elegant early C19th George III period mahogany 3-pillar pedestal dining table of good scale and proportions. Raised on three turned 'gun-barrel' column supports with reeded ring detail, having reeded 3-splay supports to the twin D-shaped end sections, the centre pedestal with corresponding reeded 4-splay supports, all fitted with square box-toe brass castors. Having 2 further extension leaves, one being a later replacement in well-matched period mahogany. The top retaining its original polished surface, having achieved a pleasing mellow colour and patina to the well-selected figured mahogany. Some historic marks and stains commensurate with age, use and purpose. The top having a reeded edge to all sections and leaves. The pedestal sections all fitted with pull-out 'loppers' to support the additional leaves. The twin D-end sections having tilting actions and fitted with brass handles and catches, the whole having original brass fittings and 'fork' clips to secure the sections together. Having had some minor historic adaptations and repairs, which do not compromise the authenticity of the table. A highly versatile and adaptable triple pillar table of practicality.
