Description

An elegant antique Edwardian mahogany chair, dating from the early 1900s, richly hand-carved and upholstered in striped damask fabric in warm tones of rose, gold, and cream. This finely crafted piece features an intricately pierced and carved backrest with scroll and acanthus leaf details, a serpentine top rail, and a padded seat for comfort. The front cabriole legs are beautifully carved with foliage motifs and terminate in classic ball-and-claw feet, reflecting the influence of the Chippendale style. A sophisticated and decorative chair, ideal for a bedroom, dressing area, or refined sitting room, bringing a touch of Edwardian elegance and craftsmanship to any interior. Seat height: 47 cm Very good antique condition, with minor age-related wear. Sturdy frame and well-preserved upholstery. A beautifully detailed piece showcasing the grace and artistry of early 20th-century English furniture.
