Description

A fine antique English Georgian-period glazed corner cabinet, ideal for display and storage in a classic interior. The cabinet stands out with its elegantly proportioned single-door glazed front, which opens to reveal three shaped interior shelves. The oak/mahogany construction features rich patina and period joinery, with the glazed panel framed by moulded wood and an arched top motif adding decorative appeal. Very good antique condition — the glass is intact, the door is fully functioning with original lock hardware, the shelves are well fitted, and the overall structure remains strong and stable. Some age-related wear is present, consistent with use and period, but these contribute to its character rather than detract from it. This piece is ideal for a hallway, lounge or period dining area, providing both practical shelving and a refined decorative accent with genuine Georgian heritage.
