Description

A fine Gothic Revival umbrella stand, beautifully crafted from rich, solid walnut with a deep, warm patina. The tall back features vertical panelling and a row of turned spindle supports, adding height and elegance to the piece. A central turned rail provides support for umbrellas and walking sticks, while the original brass drip tray at the base — naturally aged with use — catches water from wet umbrellas. The side panels showcase pierced trefoil-style cut-outs, a hallmark of the Gothic Revival aesthetic that flourished in the late 19th century. With its combination of architectural detailing and practical design, this walnut stand is both a functional hallway piece and a beautiful example of Victorian craftsmanship.
