Description

Large Edwardian Oak Refectory Table on Slab Ends – Antique Dining Table Elevate your interior with this stunning Edwardian oak refectory table, a timeless piece that blends heritage craftsmanship with robust elegance. Crafted in the early 20th century, this large antique table features a solid oak rectangular top supported by traditional slab ends, offering both visual weight and structural integrity. Its generous proportions make it ideal for grand dining rooms, heritage homes, or statement commercial spaces. The table showcases a beautiful contrast between the lighter oak tabletop and the darker, richly patinated slab legs, enhancing its rustic charm. With visible wood grain, handcrafted joinery, and a sturdy stretcher beam, this piece is a testament to Edwardian design principles—functional, enduring, and full of character. Key Features • Period: Edwardian (circa early 1900s) • Material: Solid oak throughout • Design: Refectory style with slab-end supports and central stretcher • Finish: Natural oak tones with aged patina • Craftsmanship: Handcrafted with visible wood grain and traditional joinery • Condition: Excellent antique condition with minor age-related wear • ...
