Description

A fine Edwardian painted mahogany music cabinet (c.1910) — of exceptional quality and charm. The twin panelled doors are richly hand-painted with romantic 18th-century courting figures in a wooded landscape, framed by crisp carved scrollwork and beaded mouldings. Inside, a series of five sliding trays provide excellent storage for sheet music, documents or curios. The cabinet stands on slender cabriole legs with acanthus carving and retains its original brass fittings, including a patented Andrew Homan & Co. door stay. A truly decorative and useful piece, full of character and artistry — perfectly suited to a drawing room, hallway or music room. Highlights England, Edwardian period, c.1910 Solid mahogany with hand-painted panels and carved detailing Five internal sliding trays with brass pulls Original gilt-brass fittings (Andrew Homan Co. patent stay) Warm golden-brown patina; excellent antique condition Height 123 cm × Width 52 cm × Depth 39 cm Styling & Placement Ideal as a statement cabinet for music collections, stationery or fine linens.
