Description

A delightful set of six Georgian period mahogany dining chairs which includes one carver chair. Each chair features a moulded back with pierced supports, a shaped padded seat finished with a blush-coloured florally decorated fabric, and is finished on square tapering legs. We have noticed that two of the set have reeded external faces to the front tapering legs and also have a deeper moulding to the back support. Please see images for details. The overall condition of the set is very good, with wear and tear commensurate with their age. A couple of the chairs have had historic repairs to either the legs or the backrests, but they are all in solid condition. Additionally, we have noticed that one chair has a small area where the backrest has been burnt, probably by a candle. Finally, the absolutely stunning blush-fabric seats are all showing wear, but there is plenty of life left in this beautiful set of Georgian dining chairs.
