Description

A fabulous Late Victorian pendant light, suspended by three bronze supports, each terminating in cast ram's head masks with acanthus detailing. The frame retains its original patinated surface, showing natural wear and oxidation from age, while the bowl is formed of hand-cut glass with geometric decoration. The upper section is fitted with elegant scrolling arms terminating in stylised rosettes, centred by a finely turned suspension mount. Originally designed for refined interiors of the late 19th century, this pendant would now make a striking feature light, equally at home above a dining table, in an entrance hall, or as a statement piece in a boutique or hospitality setting.
