Description

This exquisite Edwardian brooch captures the essence of late 19th to early 20th-century romanticism. The swallow, a beloved symbol of constancy and safe return, is rendered in shimmering rose-cut diamonds, appearing mid-flight above a delicate 15ct gold bar. The end is adorned with a diamond-set rosette with a natural pearl at its centre. A wonderful example of the "razor blade" mounting style, the brooch achieves a visual lightness and elegance. Ideal for collectors and connoisseurs of meaningful antique jewellery. Period: Edwardian, c.1900 Metal: 15ct yellow gold (acid tested) Stones: Rose-cut diamonds, natural seed pearl Length: 5.3 cm Swallow dimensions: 25 x 17 mm Weight: 4.3g Condition: Excellent. Modern clasp fitted in keeping with the style. Pairs beautifully with Edwardian pearl and diamond ring we now have in stock! (see last photo)
