Description

This is a fine quality antique English Georgian linen press, constructed from top quality flame mahogany and decorated with boxwood inlay, circa 1780, in excellent condition. The top section supports a detachable protruding boxwood cross-banded and inlaid dentil architectural cornice, with a central reeded inlaid panel, flanked by a beautiful moulded swan-neck pediment, incorporating decorative boxwood cross-banding and fan motifs. Below are two exquisite flame mahogany doors, decorated with fine mahogany cross-banding and mouldings, incorporating further boxwood string inlay. The doors are also decorated with fan-shaped boxwood motifs. The left-hand door retains its original brass locking mechanism. The right-hand door features the original working lever lock (with working key). The two doors open up to reveal a storage area, fitted with five large removable oak linen trays. The linen trays are constructed with fine hand-dovetailed joints. The Georgian linen press sits on a base of two-over-three graduated drawers which are constructed with hand-dovetail joints; comprising solid oak drawer linings and bottoms. The drawer fronts are decorated with boxwood cross...
