Description

We are delighted to offer this stylish pair of solid silver Regency coasters made by William Eaton in London, 1815. Being made in the Regency period, the pair features a most wonderful design of a gadrooned border, with the rest presenting an understated yet splendid mirror finish. Particularly noteworthy and desirable for the discerning collector is the usage of solid silver even on the base which distinguishes this pair from counterpart coasters that usually have a wooden base. Such opulence in combination with its mirror finish allows for the light to reflect and 'bounce' off each section, further elevating the splendour and ambience of whichever setting they may be used in. Underneath, a wooden base and felt lining are present in order to prevent scratches on the surface of the table. Undoubtedly stylish even as a display piece on a table, better yet, such fine silverware can also be practically used in the modern-day. Whether it be serving wine or other beverages of your choice or perhaps to place a glass flower vase within. A wonderful way to display your passion and appreciation for fine antiques and history and a conversation starter if used on an occasio...
