Description

A 1910s writing desk, fitted with two drawers and retaining its original green leather writing surface with gilt detailing. The desk stands on square tapering legs with spade feet, giving it a refined yet sturdy appearance. The drawers feature their original brass swan-neck handles and smooth oak linings, showing quality craftsmanship throughout. The oak has developed a warm patina over time, with light, honest wear to the leather top consistent with age and use. This desk would have originally graced an office or study. Ideal today for use as a writing table, console, or display piece in a home or retail setting.
