Description

An exquisite Victorian burr walnut loo table, dating from around 1860, showcasing superb craftsmanship and the natural beauty of book-matched walnut veneer. The oval tilting top rests on an elegant carved column base with quadruple turned supports and scrolling cabriole legs ending in original ceramic castors. Originally used for the Victorian card game "loo," this piece now serves beautifully as a centre table, occasional table, or decorative display table in any traditional or period interior. Very good antique condition — solid and stable, with a smooth tilting mechanism. Minor age-related wear adds character to this fine 19th-century piece.
