Description

A fine example of an early 19th-century Regency Pembroke table, crafted from rich mahogany and featuring elegant turned legs set on original brass and ceramic castors. The table has drop leaves supported by hinged brackets, allowing for flexible use as a dining, side, or occasional table. The simplicity of form combined with graceful leg turnings and warm patina makes this piece a timeless classic of the Regency period. Width open 98 cm. Very good antique condition — sturdy and functional with age-consistent wear that enhances its authentic character.
