Description

An elegant Regency period mahogany chair, dating to around 1820, featuring finely carved details typical of the era. The backrest displays beautifully shaped scroll ends with acanthus leaf carving and a central rosette motif on the crossbar. The seat is traditionally upholstered in a blue floral fabric, adding a refined contrast to the warm patina of the mahogany. The chair stands on reeded and turned front legs and elegant sabre rear legs, showcasing the grace and balance characteristic of early 19th-century English furniture design. Seat height: 47 cm. Very good antique condition — solid frame, minor wear consistent with age, upholstery clean and comfortable.
