Description

A wonderful matching pair of regency design demi-lune console side tables, beautifully made from a variety of wood veneers and displaying a fabulous grain and natural original rich colour. They have been hand crafted using fine cuts of both burr-walnut veneers to the frontal fascia and walnut on the upper surfaces, with a one inch mahogany bordering the circumference around the top surfaces, being finely edged in a dark ebony stringing with cherrywood inlay to the lower front curved edge. Well wax finished with a good surface patina and original satin and honey glazed colouring, with no signs of fading and without any bad marks on the top surfaces. These lovely examples are believed to date between 1830-50. Condition overall is very good and original throughout considering the age.
