Description

Antique mahogany Regency drop leaf Pembroke table with drop ring handles and brass casted feet Whole top crossbanded in satinwood with string inlays around the drawers and legs Circa 1820 The term 'Pembroke table' comes from the Countess of Pembroke, a prominent English aristocrat of the late 18th century, who is traditionally credited with either commissioning or popularising this style of table The design emerged in England around the 1750s–1770s, during the Georgian period It was especially associated with elegant, lightweight, and versatile furniture that could be easily moved around a room – in contrast to the heavy, fixed dining tables of earlier centuries We ship to every corner of the planet - please get in touch for a shipping quote We are open by appointment - please get in touch Dimensions are in inches (CM) Width x Depth x Height 21 (53) x 33 (84) x 27.5 (70) Open Top: 50 (127) x 32.5 (83)
