Description

A Very Good Quality Mid 19th Century Mahogany Quartetto Nest Of Four Rectangular Coffee Tables, Having Well Figured Tops With Crossbanded & Strung Decoration, Raised On Elegant Turned Upright Supports, United By Cross Stretchers. Terminating On Elegant Sabre Feet. Dating towards the end of the 19th century, but in the Georgian style as is common for this period these tables are very good quality and extremely useful indeed. The top of each table is constructed from well figured, rich mahogany timber with elegant cross banded decoration. The combination of these features creates a good contrast and an elegant look in combination with the boxwood stringing. The tables are in good, solid, functional condition, with very little restoration or existing damage to speak of. It is worth noting that we have had many similar nests of this period and it's not that often that they are found without rudimentary repairs to smashed legs, or with tops that have faded to totally different colour, split, or just generally look different. Its therefore clear that this particular nest has been well loved, cherished and used throughout its life. As with all items which we offer for sale t...
