Description

-Welcome to Mersham Manor Antiques- A charming large 19th century copper cauldron, which would have originally been used for cooking food over a fire. This unusually large cauldron would now work perfectly as a log bin due to its wonderful large size. The copper has developed a beautiful aged verdigris finish and generally a wonderful aged patina and textured character. Having heavy sturdy hand forged iron strap-work sides with iron loop handles used for hanging over a fire. The base shows signs of the flames which would have once heated this large cauldron up, which just adds to its historical charm. Very solid sturdy and strong. The dimensions are. Height-36cm. Width taken at base-52cm. Width taken at the top opening outer edge-42cm. Depth-52cm. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have any questions about this item. VIEWING.
