Description

George V mahogany 3-pillar dining table This impressive George V mahogany 3-pillar dining table is a superb example of early 20th-century craftsmanship, offering exceptional versatility and elegant design. Beautifully made in richly figured mahogany, the table includes two additional leaves, allowing it to extend to a generous 368 cm (145 ins)—ideal for large gatherings and formal dining. The table can also be used without the leaves, measuring 254 cm closed, making it adaptable for everyday use or smaller dining spaces. It stands on three finely turned columns with elegant splay legs, each fitted with cast brass claw castors for smooth movement and refined period character. Both end columns feature triple legs, while the central support has a quadruple-legged column, ensuring superb stability even when fully extended. A striking and functional George V dining table that brings classic English style to any dining room.
