Description

William IV Round Mahogany Triform Occasional Table. A very rare and unusual early table. This is an exceptional example of a high-quality English Late regency - William IV Occasional Table (circa 1815 -1835), also known as a Lamp or Reading Stand, executed in fine, deep-patinated Mahogany. The table embodies the refined elegance and architectural precision characteristic of the Neoclassical Revival. The circular top showcases high-quality cabinetmaking featuring highly figured flame Mahogany veneer. This is beautifully framed by a border of cross-banded mahogany around the edge. The whole top retains a rich, mature polish and surface patina consistent with its age. The top is supported by a truly distinctive and elegant three-sided (tri-faceted) pedestal. This unusual detail replaces the typical cylindrical shaft with three flat vertical faces that narrow as they descend to the base, lending the piece a refined visual lightness and serving as a key stylistic indicator of the high-end Regency period. The pedestal terminates in a sturdy triform platform base—a classic three-legged support structure. The three substantial legs are boldly swept and scrolled, providing excell...
