Description

This exceptional refectory table, crafted from solid oak in the 18th century, remains in untouched condition—a rare and desirable state that speaks volumes of its centuries of use. Its beautiful two-plank top, complete with traditional breadboard ends, bears the gentle undulations and patina of historical integrity. The thick legs are boldly carved with bulbous, leaf-like motifs and vertical fluting, while horizontal stretchers provide strength and stability to the frame. Structurally, it remains impressively sound, with a rich, warm colouring and striking grain patterns that enhance its visual appeal. It exudes timeless appeal and would make a distinguished addition to any home ideal for both traditional and contemporary interiors.
