Description

Early Victorian Mahogany Extending Dining Table, Circa 1850 A fine and substantial mid-19th century mahogany pull-out extending dining table of generous proportions. The solid mahogany top has rounded corners and a moulded edge, extending by way of telescopic bearer stretchers and three original leaves, allowing the table to be adjusted in length as required. The leaves are secured with Nettlefold stamped brass clips. The table stands on turned legs of elegant form, each fitted with quality brass castors. Excellent craftsmanship and choice of timber throughout. At 9 feet in length when fully extended and 4½ feet wide, this table will comfortably seat ten to twelve diners, and up to fourteen on occasion. As an early pull-out design, it requires two people to extend, predating the later Victorian wind-out mechanism. Dimensions (approximate) Height: 74 cm (29") Length (extended): 274.5 cm (108") Length (without leaves): 142 cm (56") Width: 137.5 cm (54") Additional leaves: 65 cm (25.5"), 33.5 cm (13"), 33.5 cm (13") Condition In very good condition throughout, structurally sound and sturdy with no loose joints. All original, with no signs of damage or repair. The surface...
