Description

A Fine Quality Early 19th Century, George III Period, Mahogany Library Table Of Unusually Small Proportions, Having Well Figured Rectangular Top With Elegant Tablet End Supports, United By High Stretcher, With Attractive Brass Moulded Decoration And Four Sabre Legs Terminating On Original Brass Castors. This super quality little library, or writing table, is superbly executed and oozes class, sophistication and elegance. It is constructed from the finest quality mahogany timber that would have been available at the time and is enhanced by the lovely brass mouldings. Typical of the late 18th, or early 19th century in terms of its relatively simplistic design it has a real charm to it. Its difficult to pinpoint quite where the table would originally have been made for, but certainly for modern day living the dimensions are fabulous and open up a whole variety of different spots around the home which could accomodate it for a wide variety of different uses. Overall the condition is excellent with no damage of any note to mention at all. As with all items which we offer for sale it has been inspected in our workshops by our highly skilled, trained antique furniture restore...
