Description

Antique French Champlevé Enamel and Brass Document Folder / Blotter – Circa 1880 A fabulous French Champlevé enamel and brass document folder (blotter), dating to the Belle Époque period, circa 1880. Beautifully made in France, this striking piece showcases the fine artistry and craftsmanship associated with 19th-century French decorative metalwork. The heavy brass body is richly adorned with exquisite Champlevé enamel decoration in a vibrant palette of turquoise, cobalt blue, ruby red, white, and green. The intricate foliate and floral scroll motifs display an exceptional level of detail and precision. Originally used for holding documents/paper/ blotting excess ink while writing with a dip pen, this elegant accessory now serves as a charming desk ornament, paperweight, or decorative objet d'art, adding colour and sophistication to any writing desk or interior setting. This one from a collection of exquisite champleve adorned pieces, look out for the others. A superb example of French Belle Époque craftsmanship, combining functionality with timeless decorative appeal, offered in fabulous condition, some minor marks to the interior silk lined interior.
