Description

Benjamin Cam Norton British, (1834-1900) Bay Horse in a Stable Oil on canvas, signed & dated 1879 Image size: 19.5 inches x 23.5 inches Size including frame: 25.5 inches x 29.5 inches A fine sporting painting of a bay horse in a stable by Benjamin Cam Norton. The stallion, most likely a hunter, is depicted standing in a stall with a metal hay feeder in the corner. Although the name of the horse has been sadly lost over time, his owner would have probably commissioned Norton to paint the portrait as a memento of his sporting successes. Benjamin Cam Norton was a sporting artist who was born on 7 April, 1834 at Guildford in Surrey. His parents were John and Katharine Rebecca Norton (née Norden) and he lived with his family in Guildford High Street. His father was a hairdresser, perfumier and print seller from Sheffield who moved to Guildford during the early 1840's where he ran a successful business and was also Honorary Secretary to the London Art Union. Although little is known about Norton's early education, at the age of around 16, he became a pupil of Jerome Goodrich (act.1829-1859). On Goodrich's recommendation, he entered the Royal Academy School on 26 December, 18...
