Description

A charming early Queen Anne period oak box coffe dating from circa 1710 constructed in the form of a small three-drawer chest. This compact coffe opens from the top, the hinged lid lifting to reveal a deep lead-lined interior. Crafted from beautifully patinated early oak, the piece displays a wonderfully matured surface and warm colour built over more than 300 years. The front is styled with three faux drawer fronts each with early ring-pull brass handles and centred by an attractive pierced brass escutcheon. Original side-carry handles remain in place and the coffe stands on shaped bracket feet typical of early 18th-century furniture. Its small scale and disguised form make this an exceptional piece suitable today as a decorative accent table, storage piece, or collector's item with strong early character. Condition Good early condition with expected age-related surface wear and historic patination.
