Description

Victorian Oil Painting: View Halloo (The Berkeley Hunt) c.1880 By Charles Faulkner (British, active 1874–1900) (This work is number 2 of 4 in the series. The remaining three paintings are available separately; if you wish to purchase all four together, please send a message.) Subject & Medium A finely executed oil on board capturing the pivotal View Halloo moment in a traditional English foxhunt. Faulkner animates riders, hounds, and the Gloucestershire landscape with the precision and atmosphere characteristic of late Victorian sporting art. Composition & Technique The composition is built on strong diagonal movement and a sense of forward momentum: Foreground: Hounds painted with tight anatomical accuracy, shown in full extension as they break into pursuit. Middle ground: Riders in scarlet coats navigate pasture, hedgerows, and brush. One leaps a fence; another is dramatically unseated behind foliage—adding dynamic energy and narrative tension. Background: A misty view of the Cotswolds and Berkeley Vale, rendered with blended, muted tones to create distance and atmosphere. Faulkner balances crisp figure work with broader landscape handling, achieving both clarity and de...
