Description

A lovely golden-oak wallclock dating from the Arts & Crafts era and in superb condition. The oak case has a nice french-polished finish and has convex glass to the dial and bevelled glass to the trunk door. The true colour of the clock is best depicted by the photograph of the lower half of the clock and is a lovely golden oak. It has a silvered dial with black Arabic numerals and a silvered pendulum. The clock strikes on the quarters and the hour sounding the Westminster chime. It strikes on rods, giving a very clear and lovely tone. It has just been serviced by a fully qualified member of The British Horological Institute.
