Description

George Gregory British, (1849-1938) Fishing Boats by the Coast Oil on canvas, signed & dated 1880 Image size: 11.25 inches x 17.25 inches Size including frame: 17.25 inches x 23.25 inches A well-executed seascape painting of fishing boats near a coastal village by George Gregory. A rowing boat is shown coming ashore in a cove near a small village which lies at the base of rocky cliffs. As figures make their way along the beach towards the fishermen, other vessels head to the shore where other figures wait. High above the cliffs overlooking the cove and shoreline can be seen the ruins of a castle. The landscape and castle ruins appear similar to that of Criccieth, Wales. George Gregory was born in Cowes, on the Isle of Wight in 1849. He was the son of Charles Gregory (1810-1896) a marine and yacht painter from whom he inherited his talent and love of seascapes. It is highly likely that he was taught by his father as his work bears his influence. He lived with his family at Medina Terrace in Cowes and remained unmarried. By 1891, he and his aging parents had moved in with his sister and brother in law at Union Street, Cowes. He continued to live with his sister's family ...
