Description

A fine pair of 18th century Chinese armorial porcelain punch bowls, beautifully hand-painted with delicate floral designs and decorative borders. This elegant bowl, measuring approximately 25.5 cm in diameter and 11 cm in height, is a wonderful example of export porcelain produced for the European market during the Qing dynasty. The exterior features charming hand-painted borders with an armourial crest, the interior carries complementary decoration. The bowl's form, proportions, and decorative style reflect the refined craftsmanship associated with Chinese export porcelain of the period. Still very usable and would complement any dining table for either liquid or foods. Despite their age, the bowls remain highly attractive and display extremely well. Great condition with slight wear consistent with pieces from the 1700s. These are fine examples of 18th century Chinese armorial wares, ideal for collectors, decorators, or those seeking a decorative antique centrepiece with genuine history and character. Dimensions: Diameter: 25.5 cm Height: 11 cm A charming and genuine pair of 18th century armorial bowls – full of period appeal and timeless decorative value.
