Description

This charming antique oak drop-leaf table, dating from approximately 1910, is a wonderful example of classic British craftsmanship. Made from solid mahogany, it features a warm, rich patina that has developed beautifully over time, giving the piece an authentic period character. The table is fitted with two drop leaves, allowing it to function equally well as a compact side table or a practical dining table when fully extended. The tapered legs and simple, elegant lines make it easy to blend into both traditional and contemporary interiors. Width open 129 cm. It remains in very good antique condition, with only light signs of age and use consistent with its history. Sturdy, clean and ready for everyday use. A versatile and timeless piece — perfect for smaller spaces, cottages, period homes, or anyone who appreciates genuine antique mahogany furniture.
