Description

This is an antique display bookcase. An English, mahogany glazed two-door book cabinet, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900. A pleasing example of period craftsmanship, ideal for presenting favourite titles or treasured ornaments. Select mahogany stocks displaying fine grain interest and rich caramel hues. Attractive figuring to the top, presenting as an ideal display or lamp surface. Tiered crown moulding projects confidently above the whole, adding architectural presence. Pair of glazed doors provide a bright window onto the contents. Dressed with a working lock to the right-hand door — key present. Doors open to reveal three removable or height-adjustable shelves, each with a useful 22.5cm depth (8.75"). Interior offers excellent versatility for books, porcelain, curios or display arrangements. Standing securely upon a continuous plinth foot, with a panelled reverse for a refined finish. A charming late Victorian glazed book cabinet, offering elegant display and dependable storage in a warm mahogany palette. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
