Description

This elegant Georgian-style mahogany twin-pillar dining table is crafted in the spirit of traditional 18th-century design, featuring a beautifully figured, mahogany top supported by two classic reeded pedestal bases, each resting on splayed legs with brass capped feet and castors. The table comes with one additional leaf, allowing it to be used either as a compact dining table or extended for larger gatherings. Its versatile design ensures it sits comfortably in both period and contemporary interiors. A standout feature of this piece is the exceptional timber selection. The cabinetmaker sourced and recycled mahogany from an original Georgian table, giving this reproduction its rich colour, depth, and character. With an abundance of reclaimed timber to choose from, only the finest sections were selected, resulting in a table that captures the warmth, patina, and authenticity of true period craftsmanship while offering the reliability of a newly made piece. Perfect for those who appreciate heritage materials and timeless design, this table combines historical charm with modern practicality.
