Description

A rare George III Chippendale period mahogany kettlestand; the beautifully figured square top with a wavy gallery and raised on a turned stem which terminates in cabriole legs with pad feet. Circa 1760. This Georgian kettlestand retains its original wavy gallery which is beautifully made in laminated sections of ebony, boxwood and mahogany. The stem and legs are made from very fine, dense Cuban mahogany which retains a wonderful colour and patination. The kettlestand is rare for an antique tripod table in being the perfect height to put a drink beside an armchair.
