Description

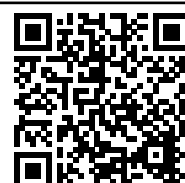

Three sections of 15thC carved limestone tracery. These came from All Saints church in Lydd, Kent, built between 1442 and 1446 by Thomas Stanley, a senior mason at Canterbury Cathedral. During World War II a bomb destroyed the east end of the church, but it was completely restored, including the three lancet windows, which now have bright stained glass designed by Leonard Walker. These fragments come from this window. H 45cm W 40cm D 26cm
