Description

A charming hand-hammered copper kettle with a warm natural patina and a beautifully shaped spout. The body shows the subtle undulations typical of hand-formed Georgian copper, giving the piece excellent character and authenticity. It retains its original brass swing handle with tubular copper grip, along with the original lid and finial. The interior shows expected age-related wear, and the underside has developed a naturally darkened patina from long use. A decorative and practical piece, ideal for kitchen display, hearth styling or adding Georgian charm to any interior. Condition Good antique condition. Stable and full of character. Dimensions Height: 19 cm (7.5 in) Width: 20 cm (7.9 in) Depth: 12.5 cm (4.9 in) Date: c.1800 (George III) Origin: England
