Description

This is an antique correspondence table. An English, mahogany lowboy or writing desk, dating to the Georgian period, circa 1780. A charmingly original personal desk with excellent colour and craftsmanship. Delightful Georgian writing table, ideal for personal correspondence or occasional use. Select stocks present fine grain interest and warm caramel hues. Displays an attractive original, gently aged patina across the whole. Arranged with three drawers — a pair of deep side drawers flanking a central drawer. Central drawer fitted with an inset, working lock — key present. Drawer fascia hosts brass drop handles upon iconic batwing backplates. Shaped apron above a comfortable kneehole adds refined Georgian style. Standing upon tall tapering legs terminating in bold pad feet. A versatile size, equally suited to a hallway, reception room or study. This is a wonderfully complete and authentic Georgian lowboy, offering timeless elegance and practical charm for any refined interior. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
