Description

A lovely compact early 20th-century shop display cabinet. The piece features a Ebonised mahogany frame with three glazed sides and a mirrored rear door, allowing merchandise to be viewed clearly from every angle. Inside sits a single adjustable glass shelf, supported on simple brass clips, with the felt-lined base still intact. The top glass panel shows honest age-related wear in the form of surface scratches, consistent with decades of countertop use in a jeweller's, or watchmaker's shop. Access is from the rear via a wooden-framed mirror door, fitted with its period brass turn latch. The base is enclosed, giving the cabinet a stable footprint and raising the display area to a practical height. ideal today for showcasing jewellery, curiosities, small retail goods, or personal collections.
