Description

A very important and recently discovered antique oil painting believed by the famous french artist painter called Jean Baptiste Isabey 1767 to 1855. Title is believed to be innocence seduced by love. This beautiful and possibly very important antique oil painting on canvas in a rococo frame is clearly signed and dated by the artist Jean-Baptiste Isabey 1819. The signature has been checked for authenticity and the brush strokes are certainly visible very similar and possibly by the famous French painter Jean Baptiste Isabey. We have also discovered a miniature painting also by Jean baptiste Isabey of the garden of his house and it shows one of the statues in his oil painting. This therefore is further proof that it is very likely a true oil painting by Jean baptiste Isabey. The style of brush strokes is also the same as his oil painting of the garden shown in the romantic painting Jean Baptiste was originally famed for his miniature portraits of the French royal family, then the revolutionary french leaders, Napoleon and also Wellington, as well as many other famous and important people from the 18th century and 19th century in and around Europe.
