Description

A 19th century parian sculpture of a pair of handsome hunting hounds. Inscribed to the base with the sculptor's initials F/T. Parian is a type of biscuit porcelain, imitating marble, developed in the mid-nineteenth century. With an unglazed finish the detail of the sculpture remains beautifully sharp. This is a lovely example in excellent condition - no breakages or repairs; and with fine detail and colour. English antique, circa 1860.
