Description

Small Edwardian mahogany bureau in the Georgian style, measuring just 79cm wide. The fall front opens to a fitted interior of drawers and pigeonholes and comes with a working key. English, circa 1900. This charming Edwardian mahogany bureau, crafted in the Georgian style, is an ideal choice for those seeking period elegance in a compact footprint. At just 79cm wide, it fits effortlessly into smaller rooms, alcoves, or home office spaces while still offering excellent storage and a classic writing surface. The crossbanded and neatly inlaid fall front opens smoothly to reveal a fitted interior - complete with pigeonholes, small drawers, and a decorative scalloped gallery. Spacious drawers below the writing surface provide generous storage and are fitted with attractive period-style brass handles. The bureau displays a warm, even tone typical of well-preserved Edwardian mahogany, with light surface marks appropriate to its age. The bureau stands on classic bracket feet, giving it a sturdy stance and a pleasing silhouette. This lovely antique bureau is in good, solid condition throughout. Drawers run smoothly, the interior is intact, and the fall front lock functions pr...
